Business in the Spotlight...

LoCo Food Distribution

Fort Collins, Colorado

LoCo Food Distribution is a wholesale distributor of locally grown, processed, and packaged foods to restaurants, institutions, and grocery stores along the Front Range in Colorado. Their online ordering catalog allows customers to view current availability and place orders for delivery. Their team works hard to make the connections between producers and wholesale purchasers, so that producers can do what they do best—produce exceptional food. And their customers can do what they do best—make and sell amazing food.

LoCo Food Distribution registered on the Colorado MarketMaker site a year ago, but recently updated their profile to include Business Connections. They have enthusiastically embraced MarketMaker and have one of the most complete profiles in the database. Says Elizabeth Mozer, Owner/Operator of LoCo Food, “I use MarketMaker regularly as a resource for my business and appreciate its presence very much.”

Mozer understands that local food is all about connections. In order to make it convenient to buy local food, someone has to make the connections. This is where LoCo Foods comes in. With over 150 brands and 2000 products in their online catalog, LoCo Food Distribution understands the need to develop relationships with both vendors and customers. “By purchasing local products, each dollar is spent an average of seven more times inside our local economy,” says Mozer, “MarketMaker makes it much easier for us to source local products.”

When asked about their MarketMaker profile, Mozer comments, “We use the Buy & Sell Forum to help locate producers with products our customers need. We also use the Business Connections area to connect with our producers and vendors. It’s a quick, easy way to link to businesses we do business with!”
